How this Course Works

The fundamental assumption behind this course is that presentation skills are indeed skills. In contrast to talents, skills are acquired through regular, repeated, supervised principle-guided practice. The course will include the essential principles for presentation preparation and delivery discussing topics ranging from tone of voice, posture and body language through visuals preparation presentation design up to handling difficult situations and crowds. The course will include multiple real-time exercises for different types of presentations. All presentations and concurrent feedback will be filmed and handed to each participant so that he/she can later refer to them to capitalize on strengths and develop weaknesses.
